

How Long Does It Take to Open a Business in dubai?

Opening your own business in Dubai is an exciting way for entrepreneurs to reach out to a larger market. Dubai is known as a very business-friendly place, having no personal income taxes and a strategic location for global access. Although there are some requirements for starting a business there, Dubai has made the entire process much easier.

The quick response is that starting your business in Dubai can happen much more quickly than you may think. Most businesses are established within days or weeks, depending on what type of business you are starting, where you want to establish your company, and how prepared you are with all of your paperwork.

Understanding the Setup Timeline

The various business formation options in Dubai vary widely in terms of their associated procedures and timelines. While registering as a company in a free zone provides comparatively faster chances of obtaining licencing, the process still takes time to complete (possibly days) depending on the systems in place within that specific free zone for receiving or approving business registrations, as described above.

As compared to establishing a free zone business, the registration process for establishing a business in Dubai on the mainland through the Department of Economic Development is generally more complex than registering as a company within one of the free zones in Dubai due to the nature of the types of businesses being registered with respect to the additional approvals required to establish the business, including office space licence registration and occasionally needing outside approvals based upon the nature of the business activity. Generally, while establishing a business on the mainland takes a longer period than establishing within a free zone, both processes have been designed with the same level of efficiency as well.

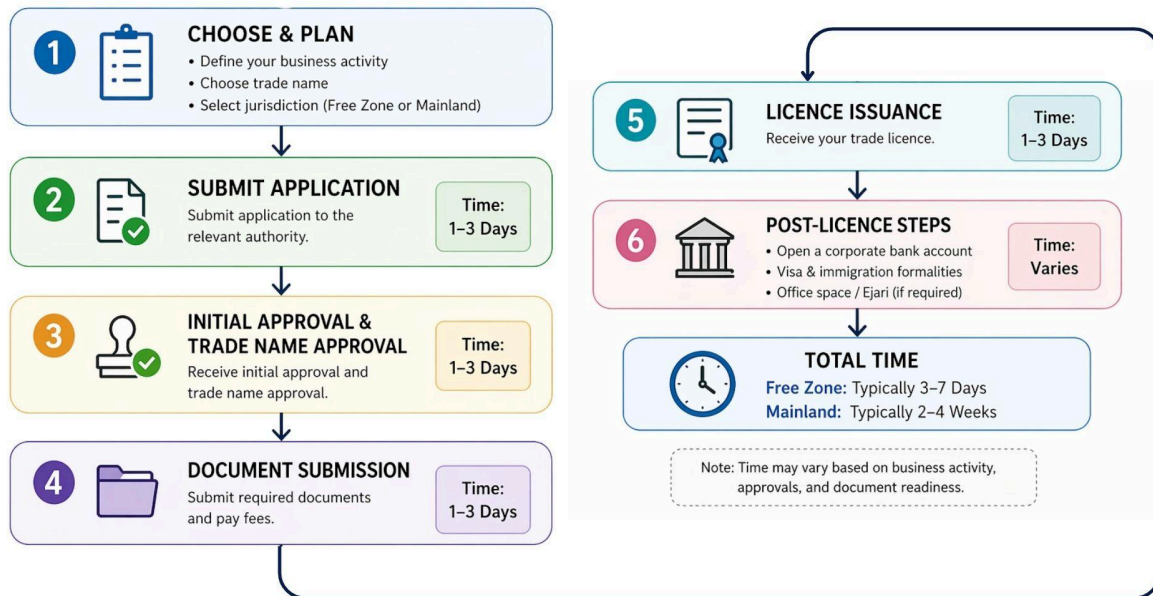

Key Factors That Affect the Timeline

Documentation is one of the most significant factors that affects the length of time it takes to start a business. When all paperwork such as passport copies, visa details and your chosen business activity are in place and readily available, this will help make the process go faster. Most delays are due to incomplete or incorrect documents and most often require revisions or reworking.

Another important understanding is the type of business being started. Businesses in industries such as healthcare, finance, and education require approval from multiple regulatory bodies. Depending on the complexity of the approval process, the time it takes to start the business will be greater due to the added layers of regulatory approvals.

Most likely, time will be minimal for trade name approval and initial authority approvals. However, if you do not select a unique and proper trade name that conforms to these regulatory requirements, you may experience unnecessary delays due to excessive correspondence related to your name choice.

Beyond the Licence: Final Steps

After receiving a trade licence, there are more steps you must complete before your business is ready to operate. Some of these items include opening a bank account (which can take longer than anticipated because of compliance/rules). Although the bank account may not affect the timing of your licence being issued, it does impact how quickly you can perform transactions after receiving your trade licence.

How to Speed Up the Process

To start quickly, prepare completely. Verify for accuracy all documentation; select the appropriate jurisdiction based on the intended outcome of your business; and clearly identify in advance what you will be doing. Several entrepreneurs have made use of business consulting firms that specialise in establishing your business, allowing entrepreneurs to have the establishment done correctly and efficiently with minimal chance of missteps.

Final Thoughts

Compared to many other cities around the world, it's quick and easy to start a business in Dubai. Whether you set up in a free zone or the mainland, you'll find that being well prepared and making good choices throughout the process will help ensure your experience is pleasant and simple. With the right approach, you should be able to turn your business concept into a legal entity very quickly.
